circa 1790-94, crowned crossed batons marks in blue, and each titled in blue verso

A pair of plates in this pattern, possibly from this service, are in the collection of Derby Museum and Art Gallery, along with the original watercolour designs by Boreman for them

The museum records that Samuel Keys, an apprentice and then gilder at Derby from circa 1785-1830 said of Boreman ' he excelled in landscape painting, and was on intimate terms with Mr Wright, the celebrated artist (Joseph Wright of Derby)
